

INCLUSION AND THE 'BINARY BOY'

Author

Gina Wilson-Burns

Short Abstract

Once described as “the most disabled child ever to be mainstreamed”, Mac, 7, is now topping his class.

It took two hours, two switches and Morse Code to quash the disability support system’s belief that Mac's disabilities were too severe for him to communicate.

This paper explores how and why things changed for Mac.