Short Abstract

A mother and son report on the ISAAC Conference held in Barcelona July 24-29, 2010 from the point of view of a young adult with CCN. Our focus is to evaluate ad hoc and structured conference events which encourage young people without speech to experience the companionship of their age group, particularly when there are often few opportunities to do so. We present a slide-show of snapshots of ISAAC2010. We invite the audience to build on our observations to discuss other initiatives to link up young people.
